At ACH, we believe it is really important that our tenants and learners can get to know their hosting culture. Part of this learning process is understanding and taking part in national holidays and celebrations. Amy and I thought that Bonfire night was one of those quintessential British events that cannot be missed!

On the week leading to 5th, during English classes, Amy taught the class what Bonfire night is, and who Guy Fawkes was. Then on the brisk November evening, we rounded up our group of tenants and learners and headed out to Wolverhampton Racecourse, where Wolverhampton's annual bonfire night celebrations are held. Whilst we waited in anticipation for the firework display, we warmed up by the open bonfire. The fireworks soon followed with many screeches, "oohhs, and ahhs!"

This event was a great way to teach our clients not only about British culture, but also a great opportunity for them to socialise with each other. We hope that even outside of the classroom, the learners can continue to explore their host culture in Wolverhampton with ACH's help.
