Ashley Community Housing have secured consultancy support from Aleron to help us secure a contract (or contracts) worth £1m per annum.

Aleron work with mission driven organisations, government, corporates, investors and philanthropists to unlock the potential barriers to social change. They advise, deliver for, and partner with organisations to achieve efficiency and impact in the social sector

Consultancy support from Aleron will put us in a position to fully exploit market opportunities. It will enable us to drive forwards the work they do with refugees through the framework of the inclusive skills agenda being promoted by Central Government, and the Combined Authorities in the West of England and the West Midlands.

And the point of this? Ultimately, by bringing the economic strand of our Rethinking Refugee campaign to market we will be able to help more refugees, and amplify our work on collective impact as the best approach to integrating refugees into an inclusive labour market.

Richard Thickpenny, ACH's Business Development Manager, explained "It's great to work with Aleron as we prepare to upscale and deliver a sustainable resettlement provision across the UK, working with 25,000 people over the next 10 years".

Aleron CEO, Nicolas Ponset, said "Aleron are delighted to be working with Ashley Community Housing as part of the Big Lottery's Big Potential Advanced scheme. We are excited to be working with such an ambitious and fast-growing organisation that combines housing, support and training to transform the lives of so many vulnerable individuals in the West of England."

Big Potential is a Big Lottery Fund grant programme that will deliver approximately £20m of grant funding over three years to eligible VCSE organisations with the aim of improving their sustainability, capacity and scale in order that they may deliver greater social impact.

The programme has two routes; Breakthrough and Advanced. Big Potential Breakthrough helps VCSE organisations work out how social investment might work for them. Big Potential Advanced helps VCSE organisations with strong proposals apply for investment or challenge for contracts.
